Description	To combat soil erosion and promote healthy soil, Indian spiritual teacher Sadhguru launched Save Soil globally. On April 5, the Isha Foundation submitted the proposal to the UN in Geneva with WHO, UN SDG lab, and IUCN support. The IUCN Member VAGDEVI Foundation conducted the "Trip to Preserve Soil" in BPC to raise awareness of soil degradation and encourage agricultural organic matter recovery. Sadhguru, its creator, motorbiked 26 countries in 100 days. The physical, chemical, and biological deterioration of soil is called degradation. Deforestation, urbanization, industrial pollution, overgrazing, and unsustainable farming degrade half the world's soil. Losing it impacts food, water, biodiversity, climate change, livelihood, conflict, and migration. More than ever, agricultural systems need change. For Sadhguru's visit, BPC students and staff responded as well and also planted plants near the JNTUH.

Description	Most plastics are still generated from fossil fuels, which increases manufacturing, use, and disposal greenhouse gas emissions. Plastics hurt the environment due to littering, poor waste management, and microplastics from product wear and tear. Recycling is low. Polymers and their chemical additives may infiltrate the food chain due to their long half-life. Some firms have developed bio-based, compostable, or biodegradable polymers to meet public demand. Plastics like these make approximately 1% of the market. Decomposable and compostable plastics could minimize plastics' environmental effect, but consumers don't understand how to dispose of them, according to the EEA briefing. Biodegradable and compostable materials may be converted into biomass, water, carbon dioxide, and mineral salts by microbes. BPC students and staff educated the community about plastic bags, their environmental effect, and their hazards.
